A good way to travel as work without formal education?

1 Comment

Posted By: 2 travel 4 on October 7, 2010 at 2:32 pm

I have little to no obligation or responsibility in the states and id really like to travel. I havnt completed my degree yet, but i really havnt seen anything that will permit me to travel and live in another country. The only program ive seen is the TEFL program, but i think i need a degree to qualify? Any other professions i could get involved in?

Anger is growing in Europe about new Washington data sharing demands, in what they call a move to stop potential terrorists from entering the US The requirements include fingerprints, DNA samples and cross border payments – data considered by many as private and sensitive. Travellers from countries refusing to share the information will have to apply for a visa to enter the US However some EU states – like Austria and Germany – have already agreed to hand over the personal data of its citizens. In June the EU and the United States signed the so-called SWIFT deal, giving American government officials access to all bank transactions within Europe. Eva Lichtenberger – an Austrian politician and member of the European Parliament – says there are no guarantees the data won't be misused if provided.
